Summer Reading

T.H. White's The Once and Future King

This book is a four-part telling of the story of King Arthur. I want this book to challenge you, however I want you to enjoy the richness of story and lure around King Arthur. Take your time reading this novel. If you read this book the week before school starts you will miss out on some of the more important aspects. You will be keeping a response journal over the summer as you read each part of the novel.

Your assignment is as follows:

Keep a personal journal broken up into four different parts. Each part will be four 1-page responses, based on your personal reactions to White's novel. You can break this up anyway you see fit and can choose to do one journal on each "section" of the novel as it is broken up into four parts. If this seems difficult to you then I would suggest having the following entries:

1. An entry for the beginning or introduction of the novel and your initial reactions.
2. An entry dealing with a character and his/her development
3. An entry dealing with and issue/idea/theme/concept that you find intriguing or difficult.
4. An entry for the conclusion with personal reactions and lessons learned.

Journaling is informal and should reflect your own assertions about the book, but use correct grammar, proper usage, and legible handwriting. Try to avoid the standard five-paragraph essay format. Your journals should have a fluidity, but journaling is informal by nature.
